STAGE AIMS AND COMPETENCES

a) To learn and respect classroom rules, learn to work within the rules, be a good citizen and respect human rights and diversity within democratic society.

b) To learn how to work both individually and as part of a team, trying hard and acting responsibly during study, in addition to demonstrating self-confidence, critical thinking skills, personal initiative, curiosity, interest, creativity and enterprise when learning.

c) To acquire the ability to prevent and resolve conflicts peacefully, which enables students to act independently within the home and family environment, as well as within other social groups where they interact.

d) To learn, understand and respect different cultures and types of people, equal rights and opportunities between men and women and to learn not to discriminate against those with disabilities.

e) To learn and use the Spanish language and, where appropriate, the co-official language of the Autonomous Community, appropriately and to get used to reading.

f) To acquire the basic communication skills needed, in at least one foreign language, to express and understand simple messages and manage everyday situations.

g) To develop basic mathematical skills and begin to resolve problems that require basic calculations, in addition to gaining geometric knowledge, learning how to use estimations and being able to apply these skills in everyday situations.

h) To learn the basics of Natural Science, Social Science, Geography, History and Culture.

i) To begin to use Information and Communication Technologies to learn, developing critical thinking skills to assess and produce ideas.

j) To use different forms of artistic representation and expressions and to begin to make visual and audiovisual contributions.

k) To value hygiene and health, accept their own body and those of others and respect differences and to use physical education and sport to promote personal and social development.

l) To learn about and value those animals most similar to the human being and adopt behaviour that promotes caring for them.

m) To develop affective skills in all aspects of their personality and interactions with others, as well as being opposed to violence, prejudice of any kind and
n) To encourage road safety education and respect teachings to avoid road accidents.

THE VAUGHAN METHOD

The Vaughan Method is based on three key elements:

1. Oral production based classes

The first significant element of the Vaughan Method is that classes are mainly based on oral production. At Vaughan Systems, we believe that grammatical knowledge alone is not enough to master a language. In a traditional class, following a non-Vaughan method, teachers often focus on "grammatical theory" and not so much on linguistic practice. For example, many teachers make students learn English as though the language were a series of equations and make them memorise "if" "present simple" + "future" = "the first conditional" structures. However, at Vaughan, we believe that in real life situations, when things really matter, there is no time to start memorising theory. Our method is designed to make students use language more flexibly, in order to teach them to communicate correctly in English, without stopping to think. In our experience, this flexible use of language cannot be acquired through hours of studying grammar but rather through hours of putting this theory into practice.

Nevertheless, although at Vaughan Systems, classes are mainly based on oral communication, this does not mean the class is dedicated solely to conversation. In fact, the number of conversation exercises we carry out is limited. Indeed, we do work mainly with grammar, however putting this grammar into practice using drill type exercises to solicit specific responses, until students absorb these responses and learn to use the language we teach flexibly.

Since we mainly work with spoken English, Vaughan Method classes are highly energetic, making it difficult for students to disconnect or get bored during lessons. They know that the teacher could ask them a question about a text or ask them for an answer at any time. The natural manner with which teachers deliver a Vaughan class promotes concentration and therefore enables students to get the most out of every second of the class, which is reflected in their progress.

2. Correction

The second significant element of the Vaughan Method is that we correct each mistake at the very moment it was made and make students repeat corrections.
Why do we correct each mistake?

a) Upon doing so, students feel confident when speaking English because they are aware of the progress they are making. They feel that the teacher is correcting them increasingly less often as they progress.

b) Students end up trusting their teachers, because they know that when they do not correct them, it is because they have used English correctly. If teachers do not correct all mistakes, students will never be sure whether what they are saying is correct. They can be sure with the Vaughan Method.

c) We believe that if a mistake is left uncorrected, it is automatically reinforced in the student's mind and they are therefore likely to repeat the same mistake again in the future. In correcting each and every one of the mistakes made, we break bad habits and replace them with good ones.

d) Students learn from the mistakes of others and this encourages them to participate and concentrate throughout the entire duration of the class.

e) Correcting each and every one of the mistakes made, creates positive pressure in the classroom since students are anxious to speak well; this is achieved quickly in the classroom environment, in a fun and demanding way.

Why do we make immediate corrections?

a) It seems that if we correct students straight away while it is fresh in their minds, it is easier for them to understand what the mistake they made was.

b) Because practice does not make perfect. Practice simply makes things become automatic. If we wait to correct a mistake, it is likely that this mistake will become automatic. We insist on correcting mistakes as soon as they are made to make students give the correct response automatically.

c) Students end up correcting their own mistakes when they speak and doing so plays a very important role in internalising the language.

Why do we make students repeat?

a) If we correct a student then continue with the class without saying anything, the correction becomes a criticism. By making students repeat the correct form, we are able to praise them and the correction process therefore always ends on a positive note.

b) When students make a mistake, it is important that they repeat the correct form several times in order to break bad habits.

c) Repetition also creates confidence, since students have very little doubt as to the correct form of expressing the idea in question.

d) Learning a language is by no means easy and mistakes are inevitable. At Vaughan, we do not turn a blind eye to mistakes; we accept that they play an important part in the learning process and therefore work on them repeatedly, until students learn to use the language correctly and flexibly.
3. Motivation

The third important element of the Vaughan Method is motivation. Our "Mission" is to ensure that students get the most out of every second of the class, in addition to their time outside the classroom. One of the main ways we keep students motivated is by showing them the progress they have made. We do not overlook mistakes but rather pinpoint and work on them until they become strong points. With the Vaughan Method, students are aware that they are actually making progress and this motivates them to want to keep improving.

HOW TO APPLY THE METHOD

The Teaching Handbook contains a detailed plan for every lesson, following the Vaughan style, for all of the Missions in each one of the units for the year. We have dedicated two complete pages to each Mission, which explain exactly how to apply the Method in sixty minute classes throughout the year. Below is a step by step guide on how to get the most out of the Teaching Handbook and, in turn, the Mission Accomplished classes.

CLASS AIMS

The first thing you will notice in the class plans is an image taken directly from the corresponding mission in the student's book. This is what students will be working with throughout the class and the drills we carry out will be based around it. A numbered list of lesson aims and the materials needed may be found below the image.

Below the Aims and Materials, we have also included a section on teaching tips, which highlight the most important grammar points to be remembered, possible "false friends" and pronunciation mistakes that may be made during the day's lesson, as well as student motivation techniques, following the Vaughan style.

Finally, we have a special section for those who "finish fast", where additional material for top students who finish exercises more quickly than expected can be found.

The aims of each lesson should be looked over before delivering the class and should prepare teachers to put their drills into practice. It is important to remember that students always come first. Knowing the direction in which a class is heading and potential difficulties that may be encountered helps to put more energy into it and plan it more carefully.

EACH LESSON PLAN

Alongside the image from the student book there is a complete plan for each lesson, which provides a minute by minute description of how the class should play out, according to the Vaughan Method. In line with the Vaughan class style, the lesson should be delivered with high energy and dynamism and should be made up of exercises that vary rhythm, content and length, combining new topics with revision, short drills with long ones and placing particular emphasis on repeating and internalising structures that are both relevant and useful.

RECAP/REFRESH

The first exercise in all of our lessons is a revision/refresh exercise, in which an essential element of the previous lesson is recapped. The aim of a refresh type exercise should be to take student's enthusiasm at the start of a lesson and turn it into a high energy drill that makes them feel positive. During a refresh exercise, it is important to ensure that the students are producing the majority of the oral activity, be it repeating a phrase pronounced by the teacher beforehand or making a phrase using a flashcard or key word. Refresh exercises should never be difficult, as this will slow down the rhythm and discourage students. The aim sought here is to make students aware of their progress and ensure they have understood the essential point from the previous class. This will motivate them and stimulate them for what is to follow.

SECTION: OBJECTIVE IN FOCUS

In the Objective in Focus section, we introduce new grammar, vocabulary and pronunciation. This part of the class is always based on an exercise in the student book and establishes the topics covered in it through a Vaughan style drill. Each lesson plan includes two Objective in Focus drills, which, although very different in style, cover the same point. Working on the same structure using different drills helps students to become confident and flexible using the same from the outset, which is essential for their future progress.

BACK TO BASICS

One of the pillars upon which the Vaughan method is based is that it focuses on the essential. Essential elements of the language, such as numbers, dates and the time must be mastered, although even the most advanced students continue to experience problems with these elements if they do not practise consistently. The Back to Basics exercises must be used and a few minutes of each lesson must be spent on a topic guaranteed to help students with their day to day English experiences.

SONG TIME

Song time is a good way of breaking more difficult drill activities up and usually occurs about half way through the class. Through Song time, students consolidate unit vocabulary and participate in an exercise that differs greatly from the others. Song time should be a high energy exercise, since this will encourage students to reengage throughout the rest of the lesson.

HOMEWORK

As a Vaughan teacher, it is important to never set homework at the end of a class, since setting homework is perhaps the part of the class at which enthusiasm is at its lowest. The corresponding unit Mission in the Activity Book provides excellent exercises for students to do at home, in addition to the material found in the Teacher Resource Book. Teachers should remember to set well defined tasks and encourage students to do these exercises with their parents.

REWIND

The Rewind section is very similar to the Refresh section, since it is used to review a previous topic. However, in the Rewind section, students review something learnt a long time ago. Just like the Refresh section, the Rewind section should be high energy and place very particular emphasis on students’ ability to speak flexibly and on their speaking skills.

GAME TIME

The most important parts of a Vaughan class are the start and end of a lesson. Just as the Refresh exercise is used to begin classes, there will be a "Game Time!" exercise to end them. The most important thing about a "Game Time!" exercise is that, just like the Refresh exercise, it is carried out with high energy and involves all students in the class. Students should end each lesson feeling happy and wanting to learn more English. The best way to achieve this is through a varied, dynamic exercise such as those offered in "Game Time!" in our lesson plans.

IN CONCLUSION

The Vaughan Method may be applied to any kind of class for any level, as teachers are the driving force behind it all. If used correctly, the Teacher book makes it possible to make the most out of each and every minute of the class, to employ the method and guarantee that students take part in a dynamic, high energy, English experience. But remember: it all begins with the teacher.
MISSION ACCOMPLISHED KEY FACTORS

COMPETENCES AND LEARNING OBJECTIVES
Carlos Marchena

The Organic Law of Education of May 2006, specifically articles 6.1 and 6.2 thereof, gave rise to a new element being incorporated into the obligatory educational stages of the curriculum. Moreover, the subsequent amendment thereof in Organic Law 8/2013, of December 2013, for Improving the Quality of Education, further introduced, under article 6.1, another curricular amendment entitled learning objectives.

These amendments, when looking at the curriculum from a systemic point of view, which are understood as the interdependence between each and every one of the elements thereof, in turn impact the instruments designed to reflect teacher organisation, i.e. didactic planning. Far from constituting mere observations or simply supporting the progress made in the field of Educational Sciences theoretically, they constitute the very backbone of the teaching task. Looking at things from this point of view, suitably defining these terms and the impact they have on editorial projects, becomes particularly relevant.

The term competence refers to the ability to comprehensively implement all knowledge and personality traits acquired, which make it possible to solve a diverse range of situations. It demonstrates an individual's ability to reorganise what they have learnt and how to apply it to new contexts and situations. Furthermore, the terms "basic" and "competences" together refer to the access all students have to compulsory education.

Indeed, basic competences may be defined in many different ways. In synthesising all the points they have in common, the following links may be identified:

• They cover a set of interrelated content, which is diverse in nature and facilitates overall learning. (Principle of meaning.)
• Contextualising what was learnt becomes particularly relevant (Principle of functionality).
• They involve a curricular selection and integration process.
• They emphasise what has been learnt on both a personal and social level.

Competences constitute a new element introduced into the curriculum in order to reorganise it; this is done with two aims in mind:

• To adjust curriculums, which are often too weighty and broad, in order to improve the quality of education. This involves making educational proposals, which are characteristically simple and versatile.
• To achieve learning that really works and makes it possible to attain true permanent education within a society governed by change and continuous innovation.

Royal Decree 126/2014, in which the basic curriculum for Primary Education is established, in accordance with Recommendation 2006/962/EC of the European Parliament and Council, issued on the 18th of December, 2006, on key competences for permanent learning, sets out the following:

Basic competences:
1. Linguistic communication.
2. Mathematical competences and basic competences in science and technology.
3. Digital competence.
4. Learning to learn.
5. Social and civic competences.
6. Sense of initiative and enterprising spirit
7. Cultural awareness and expressions

In turn, the learning standards constitute the different levels of knowledge and skills (content and competences) established for students of each subject and stage or level being assessed. These standards establish what students must learn and, as a result, what the teacher must teach. Indeed, it is precisely in this teaching proposal that learning standards play an instrumental role (assessment tool) for determining the achievements outlined above.

Exploring this idea in more detail, we are able to confirm that these standards provide the teacher with information on the success they have achieved and the goals yet to be met, which enables them to focus on and plan the teaching progress using their schedule. This means that the curriculum and particularly, the basic competences, constitute a basic reference point when it comes to establishing what our students should learn, whilst the standards make it possible to monitor them. These standards in turn require levels of achievement to be established. As a result, a scale according to which said standards may be evaluated must be defined, which facilitates a truly personalised learning process. In turn, this creates the need to employ more qualitative assessment tools, amongst which technical observation tools are deemed most important.

Looking at didactic planning from a learning standards point of view, these standards constitute the guidelines upon which teaching should be based. In this sense, when linking the concept referred to above with learning maps, these standards define learning targets, without specifying how these targets should be met. Teaching efforts are therefore aimed at each and every one of the students meeting these targets, the work they carry out being based on a personal feedback process.

In accordance with the above, the learning standards should incorporate a series of characteristics:
• They should include a wide range of knowledge and/or skills that students must attain.
• It must be possible to assess them. In other words, it must be possible to measure the knowledge and skills established using approved tools and avoiding value judgments.
• They should be written clearly and concisely. The language used to describe requirements at each and every achievement level should be unambiguous.
• They should incorporate learning levels that make it possible to classify students' progress in accordance with how the curriculum is designed.
• The level they require should be appropriate and suited to the potential of the students at which they are aimed.
• They should be inclusive. They must respect different teaching and learning styles, without specifying how goals should be met or restricting the way in which achievement thereof is shown.

In view of what is established within the current organic standards framework, the key to the entire didactic proposal is that it must reconcile these two curricular elements, in such a way that the standards serve as a basic "roadmap", to combine content and competences and ensure equality, by designing intrinsic tasks that model such proposals.

TEACHING VALUES
Rafael Valbuena and Ricardo Gómez

As is the case with all polysemic words, discussing their meaning enables us to focus on the context or contexts in which they might be used. In a conversation, we are able to distinguish between expressions such as, "I really value (appreciate) your opinion", "the value (financial worth) of the company's shares has dropped in the last two years", or "Jack was the team's most valued (highly-regarded) player last season".

Moreover, when "value" is used in the plural, i.e. when someone talks about "values", we are able to work out that they are using a specific meaning from the dictionary, which refers to the whole set of values respected by a certain group or entity. We therefore use phrases such as "we should teach values" or "it seems our society is suffering from a crisis in values".

Indeed, there is a branch of philosophy concerned with the study of values. This branch is known as axiology, defined for the first time in 1902, although people began to reflect on values a few centuries before that, when some thinkers tried to define the qualities of an individual or social group, which they added to other, more tangible characteristics. Furthermore, they established certain value categories, namely social values, values necessary for peaceful cohabitation within society (cultural identity, tolerance, justice, equality and solidarity, etc.,) and personal values (honesty, loyalty, austerity, humility and modesty, etc). They also distinguished different types of ethics, such as those mentioned above and aesthetics (balance, beauty and harmony, etc).
Indeed, some philosophical groups consider values to be subjective entities, in the sense that they are derived from interpretations made by individuals and social groups, as a kind of social agreement. As a result, these values change as societies evolve. Other thinkers maintain that values are objective entities, i.e. basic principles upon which morals and professional ethics are based, which regulate the ethical behaviour of individuals and groups.

Value types and hierarchies

Whether objective or not, many philosophers believe it necessary to establish a hierarchical set of values, so as to enable people and societies to organise themselves around them, in order to get what they need, i.e. food, health, protection, peace, security, environmental quality, progress and happiness. It should therefore be compulsory to comply with values such as social justice, for instance, since it constitutes one of the pillars of human society and is in turn, based on other values related to people and equality before the law. This set of "great values" exists at the heart of our political systems, laws and penal codes, in a more or less correct and complete way.

In smaller environments, such as a company, family or the school itself, other values exist, which help to meet the specific goals of this social group. Generally speaking, they are of utmost necessity when it comes to achieving social cohesion, peaceful cohabitation and meeting the specific needs of each of the group's members. Some of these ethical values include:

- Value group related to RESPECT, the most important or essential of which include respecting nature, other people and yourself, which in turn give us tolerance, composure and patience, etc.
- Group of values related to JUSTICE: Comradeship, solidarity, truthfulness, loyalty, gratitude and hard work (in the sense of endeavor, effort and perseverance), etc.
- Group of values related to SELF-CONTROL: Bravery, austerity, modesty, discretion, serenity and resilience, etc.

This category of values is by no means exhaustive and may vary slightly in axiology contracts. Nevertheless, although the words used may vary, there will be very little difference in their meaning.

In contrast to ethical values, it is not compulsory to comply with aesthetic values. Nevertheless, they are worth emphasising as they bring satisfaction and happiness, not only to those who practise such values but also to those who witness them. Aesthetic values refer to practising sport, arts, games and creative leisure, etc. Nobody is obliged to play the piano, dance or paint but we believe things like reading, playing, visiting museums, going to the cinema or a concert, enrolling at music schools or practising sport to be valuable. Upon putting these values into practice, we feel better about ourselves, are happier and feel more complete as a person.
Teaching values at school. Where to start?

According to axiology, individuals have a moral "axis" or conscience, which is like a body that gives rise to intuition, being able to recognise and appreciate the value of an action and certain behaviours or situations. One purpose of the school should be to teach this "axis", not only from a moral standpoint, in which our conscience enables us to judge whether or not a value has been complied with but also in terms of "the place and means" with which to clarify the values upon which both individual and group actions should be based. It is important to bear in mind that a value is something that "must be", even if it is not complied with or carried out.

School is a social environment in which we learn, share and live together. Boys and girls participate in the "great social values" surrounding the school and in turn, teachers create a space in which to develop "other values" derived from learning, living and working together.

It is therefore worth looking to the definitions of the word "value" given in the official Royal Spanish Academy dictionary:

1. "The worth of things, in terms of usefulness or ability, to meet needs or provide wellbeing or enjoyment". Values related to learning, such as appreciating knowledge, enjoyment through discovery or enjoying speaking a language itself as a means of communication, etc., are derived from this meaning.

2. "The scope of the meaning or importance of a thing, action, word or sentence", which leads us to think about the repercussions of our actions and in turn, to find values related to justice and respect.

3. "The quality possessed by certain entities, which are considered positive and thereby held in high esteem", for example an appreciation for the arts, sciences etc., and the sense of wellbeing they give us.

As teachers, it is our responsibility to make an effort to develop behaviour based values such as respect, self-control and justice. Throughout the year, using the didactic proposals linked to the unit plans, specific values will be mentioned, for example modest spending, discretion in the sense of good judgment when it comes to speaking and working, responsibility in terms of being aware of the consequences of our actions, self-control when it comes to criticising or making judgments, respect for nature and social assets, perseverance with our tasks, loyalty and companionship when it comes to teamwork, etc.

It is clear that we should teach the ethical and aesthetic values mentioned above, thus developing and maturing this moral "axis". When working in the classroom, we should name and describe these values, to make them "visible" to our students, who will eventually incorporate them into their actions, furthermore choosing the appropriate steps to put them into practice. History presents us with many examples of what happens when societies and individuals and sometimes even the majority, act unethically, according to their own wants and beliefs. Regardless of our personal beliefs, this should be reason enough to confer objectivity to some values and make a deliberate, systematic effort to convey them, as a strong foundation upon which society may develop and progress, both sensibly and effectively.

MULTIPLE INTELLIGENCES
Blanca Aguilar

"Every person has a unique combination of multiple intelligences. This constitutes the fundamental challenge faced by education. We might ignore these differences and assume all minds to be the same. Or we might nurture the differences between them".

(Howard Gardner)

The concept of multiple intelligences was introduced by Howard Gardner. In his book, Frames of mind (1995), eight types of intelligence are described, namely linguistic intelligence, mathematical/logical intelligence, spatial intelligence, bodily or motor-kinesthetic intelligence, interpersonal intelligence, intra-personal intelligence and naturalistic intelligence.

The use of his theory, based on the science of knowledge, in psychology and neuroscience, not only revolutionised the concept of intelligence that existed to that date but also gave rise to changes in pedagogical focus. Indeed, according to this concept of intelligence, we all possess each type but each one is present to a greater or lesser degree depending on our biological make-up, interaction with others and the culture surrounding us. This means that each individual has a unique combination of intelligences. Furthermore, Gardner defines intelligence as the ability to "act", to solve and create problems, create products and play a useful role within society. This ability may therefore be developed through stimuli, experiences and situations, etc., thus making genetic make-up or predisposition important but not decisive.

This approach therefore gives rise to a significant change to the concept of school and education.

About the teacher:
Teachers should have excellent observation skills and learn to adopt a role that gives students room to discover their predominant type(s) of intelligence and own leaning styles. This will benefit students and forms the basis upon which to develop the curriculum.
They should respect the individual characteristics of each learning type and the abilities of each particular student, without overvaluing some types at the expense of others and thinking of each student as a unique being with unique needs.

About the student:
In the sense of a set of intelligences, attention should be paid to each individual's weak points in order to develop intelligence as harmoniously as
Each student should be given their own role within the micro-society formed in the classroom so that the intelligences they have serve the group. As a result, we must help each student to find their place within this society, in order to enable them to achieve emotional balance and a personal self-image with which they are able to collaborate in all class activities, so as to contribute to the best of each individual's skills.

About the curriculum:
The curriculum should ensure that situations in which all types of intelligences are worked on are created, that learning models are varied, that the type of activities carried out develop all kinds of intelligence, that assessment systems also take into account the fact that learning models are not the same for everybody and that they are therefore more in-depth, flexible and broad in scope.

Interpersonal Intelligence
- Understanding others and interacting with them
- Establishing and maintaining relationships with others
- Becoming aware of the needs of others
- Showing initiative in games and group activities
- Showing ability to give answers
- Helping others to identify and overcome problems
- Working with others and enjoying working as a team
- Knowing how to put yourself in others' shoes
- Mediating conflict, organising, leading and convincing

Intra-personal Intelligence
- Developing an accurate self-image
- Making an effort to recognise, express and control one's own emotions
- Reflecting on decision making
- Setting oneself targets suited to personal strengths and weaknesses
- Showing ability to manage independently in different situations

Spatial intelligence
- Thinking in 3D
- Finding one's way around everyday spaces
- Using drawings as a means of representation
- Interpreting drawings and arts and crafts works
- Imagining and visualising settings and situations

Bodily/Kinesthetic intelligence
- Using the body as a means of self-expression
- Controlling the body in order to achieve coordination, skill, balance, flexibility, strength and speed
- Acquiring motor skills to carry out precise tasks using the hands
- Recognising measurements and volumes
- Coordinating the body and mind to achieve a certain goal
Musical intelligence
- Identifying sounds
- Picking up the rhythm, tone and timbre of sounds
- To mimic rhythms, sounds and melodies
- Listening to, humming, singing and interpreting songs and musical works
- Differentiating sound properties
- Enjoying handling musical instruments

Naturalistic intelligence
- Recognising plants, animals, people or elements from our natural environment
- Showing curiosity in discovering different organisms, elements and phenomenon within nature
- Collecting, categorising and using information relative to the environment
- Observing, interpreting, caring for and questioning the environment

COOPERATIVE LEARNING

Yolanda G. Huerta

Cooperative learning is based on two basic assumptions, namely students’ active participation in their learning process and working together, sharing responsibility and helping one another. It is defined as follows: "Didactic use of small groups in which students work together to optimise their own learning and that of others" (Johnson, Johnson and Holubec, 1999).

So why should we put cooperative learning into practice? What advantages does it have over other learning structures?

- If done properly, structuring learning on a cooperative model creates a classroom environment that fosters learning and makes it possible to achieve better results in terms of academic performance.
- It makes it easier to pay attention to diversity, providing strategies and resources to manage heterogeneity in the classroom. Teachers have more time to assist students with greater needs individually. Furthermore, these students may also benefit from the help of their classmates. Likewise, it fosters the learning of more gifted students. Ultimately, it enables the creation of inclusive classrooms.
- It is a good way to teach values such as solidarity, cooperation, coexistence, conversation and respect for differences.
- Individual learning and teacher-student interaction are not eliminated but rather added to student-student interaction and teamwork.
- It improves the quality of group interactions and interactions with the teacher, thus encouraging a more positive classroom environment.
- Cooperative learning teams provide an ideal natural setting in which to teach social and other skills, such as communication and methodological competences and put them into practice. It entails simultaneously internalising annual content and learning to work as a team.
- It may be applied to all levels of education and in all areas of the curriculum.
• Cooperative learning makes working in the classroom more appealing and motivates better students working in a team.

Cooperative learning is based around classroom teamwork, however entails much more than just group work. Indeed, it involves:
• Members of the team working to achieve a common goal. Each student's efforts benefit their own learning, whilst also benefiting the rest of the group. Students depend on one another and must join forces to achieve their goal (positive interdependence between participants).
• Each member of the team taking responsibility for their share of the work and also for improving their own individual performance, thus preventing certain students from relying on the work of others (personal responsibility and individual performance).
• Creating a place and time in which to share individual work, resources, materials and opinions. Furthermore, it requires students in the group to interact, motivate one another, help each other out and feel appreciated and respected (promotes face-to-face interaction). It also means all group members have an equal chance to and are equally obliged to participate (equal participation) and always have someone in the group with whom they can interact (simultaneous interaction).

In order to fulfill these aims, several authors, such as Spencer Kagan, Robert E. Slavin, A. Ovejero, Pere Pujolàs and many others have described a series of (both simple and complex) cooperative learning structures, which facilitate the organisation of interaction between members of a work group. These structures consist of a set of social activities, which are designed for a specific purpose but which do not include content. They may be considered "strategies or tips" which, when applied to curricular content, guarantee that students in a work team interact with one another as much as possible, all share the work and help their fellow team members to learn.

Simple learning structures are easy to acquire and use in the classroom and are relatively short. They do not require much preparation and the skills they require students to put into practice are by no means complex. Indeed, as Spencer Kagan would say, "learn it today, apply it tomorrow and use it for the rest of your life". On the other hand, more time and perhaps even various sessions must be spent on complex learning structures in the classroom, which furthermore require greater group preparation. In this didactic proposal, a series of simple learning structures are put forward, which are to be applied to various content within the curriculum.

It must be noted that teachers take on a different role where an individual model is concerned. This will serve to support and direct teamwork and resolve doubts or difficulties that may arise. The suitability of the team should also be taken into account, to ensure team members are motivated.

How should cooperative learning be implemented in the classroom?

A good way of implementing cooperative learning is to take a simple cooperative learning structure, organise work groups, then apply this structure to a class session. The result would then have to be observed and assessed, in order to repeat the process, improving those elements necessary. One by one, cooperative work structures will thereby be incorporated gradually and sequentially into normal classroom practice.

Below is a list of specific steps to be followed and the fundamental elements to be worked on in order to successfully implement cooperative learning in the classroom.

1. Reinforce group cohesion and the positive classroom environment, through group dynamics, games and activities.
2. Create cooperative work groups. Various pairs and "random teams" of four students should be created in the first classroom cooperative learning experiences, in order to see how they work together. Towards the end of the first term, teams of four, referred to as "base teams" should be created, in which students are able to work consistently for at least one month. Throughout the second term, teams will be altered if necessary to ensure that in the third term, the base teams are able to work consistently. One key aspect of cooperative learning is that base teams are mixed. Moreover, each group may choose a name, picture and/or colour with which to identify themselves. They would also have their own designated space within the classroom.
3. Learn to cooperate and work as a team by learning about and practicing social skills, resolving conflicts and employing group organisation skills. Teamwork is a strategy we employ to facilitate learning, although it also constitutes content that must be taught. When put into practice during cooperative learning, certain skills, such as helping one another, participating, encouraging teamwork, communicating with others appropriately and resolving conflicts, etc., enable students to learn and improve as the school year progresses.

Strategies for ensuring effective "Teamwork" include:
• Assigning roles to base team members on a rotary basis, once every two weeks.
• Agreeing on rules and bearing them in mind during teamwork and coexistence in the classroom.
• Making a "quiet sign".
• Assessing group work.
Chronological guidelines on the main actions to be carried out when implementing cooperative learning throughout the year

First Term
- Encouraging group cohesion and a positive classroom environment.
- Establishing working rules.
- Creating random pairs and teams for observation.
- Putting the first cooperative work structures into practice.

Second Term
- Creating base teams, observing them and making accurate changes.
- Assigning roles within teams.
- Continuing to gradually introduce new cooperative structures and combining them with previous structures.
- Reinforcing cooperation and teamwork as social habits.
- Introducing self-assessment to the work groups.

Third Term
- Working in consistent work teams throughout the entire term.
- Continuing to put the cooperative structures introduced into practice, whilst incorporating new, increasingly complex structures.
- Reinforcing cooperation and teamwork as social habits.
- Assessing how groups work together and the general classroom dynamic.

INFORMATION AND COMMUNICATIONS TECHNOLOGIES (ICT)

Inés Monreal

Before beginning, it is necessary to go through a brief overview of the social change that has been under way over the last few decades, and which necessarily has an effect on our educational environment and on the actors that make it up including educators. We are in the midst of a highly technological society that in recent years has undergone a radical change stemming, in part, from the fast, continuous development of ICT. The fact of living in this society has created an awareness of the need to provide educators with specialised training so that they can use education technologies properly, and derive the maximum benefit from them.

This change has given rise to new communication languages, modes and environments, which educators should be prepared to make use of, in turn acquiring digital competence, which is understood to mean having the ability to seek out, obtain, process and communicate information, and transform it into knowledge.

In order to understand the presence of ITC in our classrooms, we must first be familiar with its two key terms: information and communication. Information, because we are immersed in an information revolution that has made it possible for all of us educators to have access to a greater amount of information, and to higher speeds for processing, distributing and storing it. In recent times, the Web has broadened this access at a dizzying pace, and now the difficulty that educators are faced with is often the time requited to sort out the documentation found in the most objective and impartial way possible, since not everything available on the Internet is trustworthy.

The second key term is communication; we know that the fact of ICT having been developed also has an influence on the rise of new uses of language and new ways of communicating. The ability to share information with other educators from anywhere in the world opens up a space for communication and exchange that would have been unthinkable just two decades ago: cyberspace or the third environment, this new social space that, by extension, is also an educational space.

ICT in education

We are convinced that schools should contribute to educating people in a comprehensive manner; this contribution pushes for students to be trained to understand information, and conditions educators to bear in mind that today's students learn differently compared to students twenty years ago. Therefore, when faced with the question, "Are we witnessing the emergence of new ways of learning?", the answer is clear: "Yes, we are aware of the fact that our students may generate Personal Learning Environments, because educators do not have all the information and, although educators are in and of themselves a source of knowledge, students have access to much broader information through the Internet".

We at ANAYA aim to work together with educators, offering them a variety of educational resources that complement their direct teaching and channel students who are faced with a new way of learning. The basic idea is to create teaching resources that are suited to students' new learning reality. For students, we encourage resources that enable different uses of and approaches to information.

It is important for schools to grow in harmony with the society of their day and age, so that we can achieve a balance between students' informal learning outside the education system and their formal learning acquired at school.

These are some of the reasons why ICT should be used in the classroom:
- Because they foster a two-way type of learning: on the one hand, more personalised, with a mind to diversity, and, on the other, learning that is also collective and collaborative.
- Because they transform the methodology of educators, who cease to be just a transmitter of contents in order to become students' companion and trainer in learning.
- Because ICT tools transform classroom dynamics: interactiveness, as one of the distinctive elements with respect to the old school, makes it possible to further motivate students to learn.

In this new model, it is the educator who must take on this ambitious commitment to the progress that educational technology makes available to them. So what is teachers' new role? To help students acquire the necessary resources in order to know how to seek out and find the information they need and integrate it into the knowledge they have already acquired, thus turning it into their own personal knowledge. Part of this help comes from the publishing house, which makes digital teaching materials available to educators.

Educator profiles

In terms of teachers' profiles, if we follow UNESCO guidelines (2008), we find that there are three different types of educators in our classrooms, as far as integrating ICT into the curriculum is concerned:

- Innovative pre-tech teacher: has continuously and naturally lived alongside technology, has developed his or her digital competence to an advanced level, and regularly uses ICT in direct teaching.
- Educator who has acquired digital competence but is not an innovator, since he or she does not seek out new ways to use ICT in the classroom.
- Technophobic educator: has not acquired digital competence and has an aversion to technological educational tools; sometimes has to do with a lack of knowledge as to the possibilities and uses that ICT can have in the classroom.

At the end of the day, we will have to adapt our mindset to a new type of society that will turn us more than ever into "world citizens". Educators cannot be strangers to knowledge of the Web, or to so-called "web 2.0" tools and their applicability in the classroom. These tools facilitate learning not just for educators, but for students as well, and help to approach ICT from a completely pragmatic perspective. Web 2.0 tools include: photopeach, glogster, flickr, google drive, slideshare, popplet, blogger and prezi.

Students and ICT

We are aware of the fact that the students in our classrooms are different to those of previous decades. There are a number of reasons for this; we may point out, for example, that they have new ways of life, and new ways of choosing and making use of information. This is a reality, just as it is a reality that students take a natural approach to ICT, since they are immersed in a technological society from which they garner significant learnings in an informal manner. We would like to offer these students teaching resources that are tailored to their level and their degree of digital competence since, moreover, we know that today's students prefer to study with digital media and we, as publishers, have made possible a type of book that is more attractive and accessible for both educators and students alike.
UNIT PLANNING

The present plan constitutes a model temporal learning sequence for the third year of Primary School. This plan may be expanded through the optional resources proposed in the Teacher's Guide, mostly by means of the drills and the Teacher's Resource Book. The Teacher's Guide presents a sequence to be followed in each lesson and details of how and when to introduce the different kinds of drills. The drills are oral activities based on repetition and correction, the basic goal of which is for the children to consolidate grammar structures so that they can then reproduce them fluently and naturally.
UNIT 0

The introductory unit consists of two pages, two Missions.

Mission 1.
UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
Introducing numbers 1 to 30 and the names of musical instruments
To describe pictures
To listen to and sing a "Rap and clap" song
To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in previous courses and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
To practise and master interrogative sentences
To correct using an audio (AB)
To look at some pictures
To complete some questions and answer them according to the pictures (AB)

Mission 2.
UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in previous courses and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills
To participate in a "Game Time!" activity. The following commands are practised: close your book, open your book, raise your hand

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
To look at a box of Noella and Asky's routines
To read and answer some questions using the simple present tense
To check the solutions with an audio
To read answers and formulate the corresponding questions in the simple present tense (AB)
To look at some pictures, read some sentences and write whether they are true or false
To check the solutions with an audio (AB)

UNIT 1

This unit (Happy Birthday) focuses on learning about birthdays. The unit contains 8 missions. Each mission lasts sixty minutes.

Mission 1.

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
- Introducing the new vocabulary, 5 objects related to birthdays using a listening.
- To listen to, point and repeat. "Shhh! Listen, point and repeat"
- To participate in a "Game Time!" activity whilst practising the alphabet
- To listen to and sing a "Sing and clap" song

  To become familiar with the rhythm and sounds of English by listening to a song
- To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
- To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in the previous units or years and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills
- To join letters that are heard in an audio and draw a picture (AB)

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
- Introducing the unit vocabulary using the Picture Dictionary
- To do a wordsearch
Mission 2
UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
Introducing the second part of the unit vocabulary, the months and the preposition "in".
To listen to the unit main vocabulary using a video
To repeat the words from the vocabulary video
Pronunciation video showing mouth movements To learn to differentiate the /k/ sound
To listen to and repeat the words that are mentioned in the pronunciation video in order to practise the /k/ sound
To become familiar with the rhythm and sounds of English through the vocabulary and pronunciation videos
To listen to some texts, complete them and repeat them
To listen to Fusy talking, and answer some questions
To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in the previous units or years and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills
To listen to an audio in which words are spelt out and the student writes the words

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
To carry out an Arts and Crafts activity "Let's make your birthday page!"
Make a word game (AB)
To join phrases in order to make sentences (AB)

Mission 3
UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
Introducing grammar using a listening exercise and other oral activities. Ordinal numbers 1st (first)-31st (thirty-first) and the dates "What date is it today?" Today is the 5th of July, 2019. Is today the 5th of July? Yes, it is. No, it isn't. My birthday is on the 5th of July
To listen to the dates (from the 1st to the 31st) practising the structure Today is the 5th of July and repeat them
To talk using the new grammar structures. Ask and answer
To participate in a "Game Time!" activity .
To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in the previous units or years and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills
To listen to an audio and complete sentences where the date is practised (AB)
To listen to an audio and match the dates to the corresponding picture (AB)

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
Reference to Grammar Appendix to read and internalise the new grammar learnt in the unit
To match the date written numerically to its corresponding ordinal number 16/02/1987 corresponds to 16th of February, 1987 (AB)
Mission 4.
UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
Introducing the second part of the grammar using listening activities: What date was it yesterday? Yesterday was the 11th of November, 2014.
Carrying out activities based on a listening activity. To look at some pictures and say the day and the date: What day is it? What's the date?
To practise interrogative sentences. To make interrogative sentences from affirmative sentences. Master the question. To check the answers using an audio. Then listen and check: (blue)? No, it isn't.
Video in which the unit grammar structures are introduced and practised
To become familiar with the rhythm and sounds of English through the characters acting out an everyday situation in a grammar video
To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in the previous units or years and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
To listen to dates and write them in the Activity Book.
Reference to Grammar Appendix to read and internalise the new grammar learnt in the unit
To unscramble words and make sentences (AB)
To read sentences and draw the face corresponding to each date
To listen to an audio and write the date that correspond to each character

Mission 5.
UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
To listen to a story with a comic-like graphic design, which includes the vocabulary and grammar that has been learnt previously Introducing a colloquial expression: Happy Birthday!
To become familiar with the rhythm and sounds of English through a reading exercise
To read a story and answer some questions
To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in the previous units or years and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills
To act out the story
To listen to a story (AB)

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
To read a story and answer some questions (AB)

Mission 6. CULTURE
UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
To listen to and say the colloquial expression learnt in Mission 5 in the Reading activity
To listen to a text about a cultural theme in the United Kingdom, Queen Elizabeth's birthday
To be able to identify some English-speaking countries
To show interest in understanding and talking about the customs of other countries
To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in the previous units or years and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills
To listen to some sentences and choose the correct option (AB)

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
To read a text about Queen Elizabeth and answer some questions
To complete some speech bubbles using colloquial expressions
To write the name of the character that says each speech bubble
To unscramble some letters and form ordinal numbers
To join the numbered letters and form words

Mission 7.
UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
A page dedicated to non-linguistic content and language integrated learning Arts and Crafts.
To be able to understand and speak in English about other subjects
To listen to a text about birthdays in the United Kingdom
To read sentences related to the text and say whether they are true or false
To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in the previous units or years and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
To look at some pictures and write the name of the action
To be able to read and write in English about the contents of other subjects
To carry out an Arts and Crafts activity: "Let's make a birthday card!"
To complete a text. To check the solutions with an audio (AB)
To draw and colour in a picture after listening to an audio (AB)

Mission I CAN.... Unit content revision.
UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING ORAL TEXTS
Recap video featuring an auxiliary teacher to revise the unit grammar and vocabulary, with particular focus on the correct pronunciation, rhythm and intonation of words and word stress and grammar structures
To repeat and imitate the structures asked for by the auxiliary teacher
To become familiar with the rhythm and sounds of English using the featured auxiliary teacher
To describe some pictures using the vocabulary and the grammar structures that have been studied in the unit
To listen to a text
To participate in a Quiz saying dates, ordinal numbers, numbering pictures and answering questions
To reproduce the unit structures orally and internalise them through the TG drills
To revise other grammar structures that have been studied in the previous units or years and internalise and consolidate them using the TG drills
To listen to and complete some sentences by selecting the correct option (AB)
To circle some words that they hear on an audio (AB)
To write the dates that they hear on an audio (AB)

UNDERSTANDING AND PRODUCING WRITTEN TEXTS
To read a text and complete an activity in the Activity Book
To write the answers of the Quiz
To circle the word that does not belong to the same semantic group as the rest (AB)
